Featuring many striking colour illustrations that have never been published before, Eye for Detail traces the early history of image manipulation techniques. This beautiful volume shows how the roles and formats of images in nature study changed dramatically throughout Europe during the sixteenth century. Discussing some of the most remarkable natural history images from this period, it is an arresting guide to the large Continental collections of naturalia drawings and an absorbing study of natural history art of the sixteenth century.

Hardback 288 pages 125 illus $50.00 November 2016

EYE FOR DETAIL

Images of Plants and Animals in Art and Science, 1500–1630

FLORIKE EGMOND

---

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Florike Egmond is a cultural historian working on the history of natural history. She lives in Rome and is affiliated to the University of Leiden. Her recent books include The World of Carolus Clusius: Natural History in the Making, 1550-1610 (2010) and The Whale Book: Whales and other Marine Animals as Described by Adriaen Coenen in 1585 (2003).

---

PRAISE FOR EYE FOR DETAIL

‘In this important, scholarly, and visually delightful volume, Florike Egmond presents a strikingly original overview of the burgeoning years of natural history depiction . . . her lucid text allows all of us to appreciate the quietly revolutionary advances in understanding brought about by these innovatory observers of nature . . . In compiling these graphic representations of natural specimens their authors displayed much more than their individual merits in art-historical terms: they also reveal the genesis of a visual vocabulary for representation that would remain influential for centuries to come.’

– Arthur MacGregor, author of Curiosity and Enlightenment